

Our Wind Co-op: Turbine #2

Stanford, MT

Installed September 2003

Jess Alger,
Organic Wheat and Cattle Rancher

"The meter's running backward.
That's what I like to see."

"I never thought I'd be wishing for the wind to blow. This way, when the wind's blowing, you're happy -- and when it's not, it's not too bad either."

"It feels great to harvest the wind because it is clean energy. I'm not pumping any carbon into the atmosphere."

"I'm also producing my own power and that's important. We, as a society, use tremendous amounts of electricity. Most people don't even realize it."
